On the other two occassions he had no doubt his Lordship would in the Hongkong Telegraph, in which, he said. tell the jury there was no privilege. On the question of malice. In law malice was assumed if the occasion of publication was no privileged. Here malice was alleged, and it was their intention to bring evidence before the jury to prove malice, the reason for that being that the malice was an aggravation of the offence. In this case they said there was a wilful slander. and that being so, they would ask the jury to give such damages as would mark their sense of the wrongful intention of the defendant. The object therefore of a good deal of the evidence would be simply to show malice. and extracts from the defendant's newspaper would be produced with the object of showing a systematic course of libel of the plaintiff by the defendant. Besides the question of malice as affecting the amount of damages to be awarded, there was also the question of compensation: In this case the greatest injury had been done to Mr. Brandt in his transactions as a man of business by the libels published against bim, his business having been brought practically to a standatill. Where he was formerly the position of a man who was improving daily his credit and renutation on the 'Rialto' the publication of the libel ruined his credit and re putation for the time being, and it would be long time before that reputation could be established in the same flourishing position again, and the only way in which that could be satisfactorily accomplished was by showing in open Court the true circumstances of the case, and by getting from the jury an expression of their opinion as ed the plaintiff. Before dealing particularly with the libels themselves he wished to let the jory know something of the antecodents of the plaintiff and the nature of business he was were published, one of which appeared ing the plaintiff the following false, scandalous, and ing and family. PRONUNCIATION. An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong. For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extense. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typography displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore charac-To illustrate the vast scope of the work the

Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples FORMOSAMr. J. G. Götz. this work contains more than five times as

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted.
